Below is a selection of comments from recent consumer tastings with the Association of Wine Educators:

"...before his belief was that Australian wine was too powerful, and difficult to pair with food. He remarked all the wines tasted that evening would make excellent food partners."

* * *

"Yes. Australian wines were perceived as EITHER good value or good wines, now they realize that actually they are both. Also as the whites are relatively low in alcohol, it showed good Oz wine doesn't always have to have a big alcoholic kick."

* * *

"Yes, many of the group said that they had previously thought that too many Australian wines were becoming standardized and lacking individuality. The diverse range shown at this event dramatically changed these perceptions, and participants said that they would look anew at the quality, premium wines."
